MANAGEMENT COMMENT

In April, the ICE-BOFA 1-10 year Euro sovereign bond index lost -1.97%. The German 10 year yield gained 39bp, ending the month at 0.94%. The German yield curve moved up over the period.

In its latest communication, the ECB indicated that the likelihood of its asset purchase program ending in the third quarter had increased, due to the acceleration of inflation induced by the war in Ukraine and the economic sanctions against Russia. In addition, it left interest rates unchanged and confirmed its forward-looking guidance. Christine Lagarde stressed that rates would remain at their current levels until inflation rises above 2% on a sustainable basis and that their adjustment would then be gradual and would take place "some time" after the end of net asset purchases.

The fund posted a performance of -2.45% for the month. It still has a lower overall duration than the benchmark (around 3.75) and is still overweighed in corporate credit, which has been the fund's main performance driver in recent months. A small short position on long rates was initiated in the second half of the month. Concerning the securities in the portfolio, some Spanish sovereign securities were sold. We maintain the overall rating of the fund at A-, with a level of volatility still below that of the benchmark.
