MANAGEMENT COMMENT

In January, market indices for emerging debt were down overall: public debt in local currency lost -1.9% (JP Morgan GBI Global Core), public debt in hard currency was down -1.2% (JP Morgan EMBI Global Total Return) and corporate debt in hard currency was unchanged 0.0% (Ishare JP Morgan EM Corporate Bond - performance Total return).

The year has begun with a great deal of volatility. Expectations of rate cuts in Europe and the United States seemed a little too optimistic. Be that as it may, from a macroeconomic point of view, we are witnessing anticipated growth for 2024 of 0.8% for Japan, 4.6% for China, 0.5% for Europe and 4.4% for the emerging countries. But more than these figures, it is the second derivative that needs to be monitored, and this is rising in the United States and in emerging countries excluding China, but with no trend for the other countries. Chinese growth is still handicapped by the property slump and a crisis of confidence among economic agents. Japan is helped by a weak currency and low interest rates.

Equity markets outside China are benefiting from positive revisions to global growth. Global growth is resilient, and positive surprises could come from restocking or from measures announced in China to support its economy. European and US interest rates and macroeconomic figures should continue to fuel volatility on emerging debt markets.
